Grandview welcomes surgeon Edward L. Mosley, Jr. to staff

Dr. Mosley attracted to area by quality of life and hospital

JASPER, TN – Grandview Medical Center recently welcomed Edward L. Mosely Jr., MD, to its growing medical staff recently as its newest general surgeon.

Dr. Mosely comes to Grandview with over 25 years experience in practicing medicine. A native of Washington, D.C., Mosley said the area was a big draw for him.

“This seems like a good area to raise a family,” Mosely said. “I like the community and the hospital impressed me. I’m looking forward to serving our patients and to becoming a part of this community.”

Mosley graduated from Fisk University with a degree in chemistry. In 1970, he graduated from the Washington, D.C., police academy before earning his medical degree at Howard University. He served his surgical internship at Youngstown Hospital Association in Youngstown, Ohio and his surgical residency at Howard University Hospital in Washington, D.C. In addition, Mosley has received numerous professional awards and honors throughout his medical career.

Mosley also served as a personal/team physician and medical consultant for professional boxers Sugar Ray Leonard, Simon Brown and Lenox Lewis.

“We’re proud to have a surgeon of Dr. Mosely’s caliber on our growing staff,” Dan Aranda, Grandview CEO, said. “The addition of Dr. Mosley to our medical staff as a surgeon is yet another improvement to the services the hospital provides this community.”

Dr. Mosley’s wife, Monique Nchotu, is in her third year of medical school in Sarasota, Fla. They have a 1-year-old son, Versharn.

In his spare time, Mosley says he enjoys tennis, biking, swimming and other physical fitness activities.
